

Our trip to Mary Arden's Farm

On Tuesday 10th July 2018, Redwood class set off to Mary Arden's Farm in Wilmore near Stratford-upon-Avon. We went to add to our large knowledge of things we already know about the Tudors. After we had the register done, we sat on a coach for 50 whole minutes. It was glum.

When we arrived, we met a friendly lady named Susanne. She encouraged us to tell her about both the Tudors and William Shakespeare. We then split into boys and girls and got changed. I felt extremely hot and heavy. Then it was time for the big reveal. The boys lifted their hats off to us and we were shown how to curtsy to the boys. The girls wore a linen shirt, a three layered dress, a hat called a coif and an apron which they used to wipe their hands. The boys wore some trousers, some ~~woolly~~ woolly socks tied with something called a girdle, a linen shirt and a jacket with a row of metal buttons down the middle. We then set off for our first activity.

Secondly, we used lucets in the Tudor House. That is a Tudor way of knitting. Some people said that it was like loombanding. It was extremely fiddley.

Following this, we went outside to do some wall hanging (painting). It was rather simple yet very beautiful. It was a linen sheet painted with Tudor roses. They were used to stop drafts.

Next we did some bread making in the Tudor house with Rosanne. We moulded some dough into balls and Rosanne put it on a shelf above the fire. Because we were the last group doing bread making, she let us try some that the other groups made before us.

It was delicious. It's a good thing that it put me in the mood for lunch...

Afterwards, we had lunch in the courtyard. We didn't have long, so I left tons! I think that was because we spent a bit too long tasting bread and cleaning.

RR Can you add punctuation?

Later on, we went to see a Tudor Dinner. One of the things that they said was that nobody could start eating until the muster had and when the muster had stood up dinner was over and you had to stop.
Also, the salt had to be brought by the master and the put down the table, the lower your job. We went over to a table to where Roxanne was waiting for us.

She After that, Roxanne showed us how to make butter by using just cream and her bare hands. However, she could only use her right hand because the Tudors believed that there a devil sat on their left shoulder. Also, their left hand was their communal hand which meant it was used to pass things along to others, therefore it had to be kept clean and could never touch their mouth.

Furthermore, Roxanne played the recorder and we danced to it. It was a special dance of which we changed a bit. At the end we gassed.

Following this, we watched a barn owl swoop over our heads, flying really low, until it was time to leave. We got changed and took a safe journey home ✓

Overall, I think that my favourite part of the day was spending it. It was so fun, and I would recommend it to anyone. ↘ recommend

Overall, I think that my favourite part of the day was creating rich opportunities and memorable experiences ↘

✓ Chronological order.
✓ Time conjunctions.

Your recount is very informative Jess.
Just check C J

2/2 yew